Bookings are now open for the Butterfly Cooke and Deaton Summer School, where players of all abilities can receive top coaching to improve their games.

The school is now in its 19th year having expanded from initially a one-week course to cover three weeks of full participation.

Based at Grantham College, the coaching incorporates all aspects needed to improve and enhance the play of all those attending. Irrespective of ability, players will have the opportunity to improve technically, tactically, mentally and physically.

The camp, delivered by England head coach Alan Cooke and five-time National singles champion Nicola Deaton and a host of leading guest coaches, also includes a diverse evening entertainment programme.

Many top players have benefitted from attending the course, including Liam Pitchford and Tom Jarvis.
