Table Tennis England and Mark Bates Ltd today extend their partnership by launching the Insurance That Supports Our Sport initiative.

Mark Bates Ltd, the sponsors of the National Championships, are offering the best value insurance to the table tennis family – and for each policy purchased they are making an additional contribution to Table Tennis England to help fund the sport's grassroots.

The offer applies to home, travel and static caravan insurance, and funeral plans, and confirms a commitment outlined when the Lincolnshire-based company was in January announced as sponsor of all three National Championships in a five-year deal.

Managing Director Mark Bates, well known to many Table Tennis England members as the father of two age group national champions – Emily and Michael – said: “My family and work colleagues have a long history in table tennis, which has provided us with a great deal of happiness.

“Earlier in the year we sponsored the National Championships in Nottingham and were fortunate to watch some thrilling matches, as well as seeing many of the members that were supporting the event.

“As part of our involvement we are providing bespoke insurance offers for Table Tennis England members. Then for each policy taken out by a Table Tennis England member we will provide further funding to the sport, making everyone a winner.

“We are firmly committed to our long-term partnership with Table Tennis England and its membership.”

Table Tennis England Chief Executive Sara Sutcliffe said: “This is a demonstration that Mark Bates Ltd is not just a headline sponsor of the Nationals series but is also committed to do so much more for the sport and the people who regularly play it.

“Our shared values make this a strong long-term partnership and although it is not yet certain when we will be able to resume competitions, we look forward to many more highlights under the banner of the Mark Bates Ltd National Championships.”
