

Outdoor Table Tennis Research

Author: Russell Moore

Posted On: August 22, 2011

Research conducted by Chris Mackintosh, Senior lecturer in Sports Development, at the Nottingham Trent University has looked at how and why outdoor table tennis events (like the popular Ping! programme) are prospering at the moment.

The pilot project run by the ETTA in partnership with local authority sports development units in five London boroughs was created to promote 'casual' play across the region and the research provided by Nottingham Trent University has helped to analyse the programme in detail.

To view the research findings click here.

Downloaded From:

<https://newsarchive.tabletennisengland.co.uk/play/social-table-tennis/outdoor-table-tennis-research/>