

New pendants from Pink Pong and Vinqui

Author: Russell Moore

Posted On: July 16, 2012

Pink Pong and Vinqui have collaborated to create these new table tennis pendants with each sale providing the cancer charity with £10 of the proceeds.

Liz May and the Pink Pong team are really excited to announce that the collaboration with Vinqui has gone live and they hope to see many of their Pink Pong supporters wearing this piece throughout the up and coming season.

To see the preview follow: <http://www.vinqui.com/table-tennis-pink-pong-pendant.html>

Pendants will be available to purchase from Friday.

May said: "There is no better company to collaborate a piece of jewellery with that will tie in with Pink Pong's mission of: 'Making a difference on and off the table'.

I am so overwhelmed by the support and encouragement I have had from my family, table tennis friends and colleagues with regards to Pink Pong and I would like to thank everyone for this. The support has given me the drive and determination to make Pink Pong a success and I believe it will encourage more people to pick up a bat too.

Vinqui state on their website "It's about letting others know that without we there is no me. It's about them never giving up on us, whatever the odds".

People who are battling with cancer need to know that Pink Pong will never give up on them. Together we will raise the profile of Pink Pong as well as raise money and awareness of ALL cancer.

Downloaded From:

<https://newsarchive.tabletennisengland.co.uk/news/archived/new-pendants-from-pink-pong-and-vinqui/>