The English Table Tennis Association has relocated from Hastings, Sussex to Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire as part of the continuing change taking place at the National Governing Body.

Hastings was the ETTA's base for 42 years since businessman Charles Wyles moved the organisation down from London in 1972 and was even the home of the International Table Tennis Federation until it moved to Lausanne (SWI) in 1998. The office moved within Hastings from Clarendon to Queensbury House, Havelock Road, September 1988 and changed from the third to the fourth floor December 2009.

The Hastings office closed for the last time at 5pm on Thursday March 13, 2014 and the new headquarters in Milton Keynes opened for business at 9am on Monday March 17, 2014.
