The University of Nottingham dominates the six-strong Great Britain squad for this summer's World University Summer Games in Chinese Taipei.

Danny Reed and Adam Harrison are both in the men's squad, alongside Colin Dalgleish of Robert Gordon University, while the women's squad comprises Nottingham duo Maria Tsaptsinos and Yolanda King, alongside Chloe Thomas from Bournemouth University.

The squad was announced by British Universities and Colleges Sport ahead of the competition, which takes place from August 19 to 30, and is the second largest multi-sport event behind the Olympics, with some 10,000 athletes competing.
