The search is on for table tennis-loving companies who are up for proving themselves in the heat of battle.

Yes, Ping Pong Fight Club is returning for 2017 in four cities around England and it is now time for businesses to sign up.

Ping Pong Fight Club is a team-based, inter-company ping pong tournament which aims to get everyone from interns to the CEO to play, network, have fun and socialise with their colleagues and like-minded people from other companies.

Four events will take place this year – in London (18th May), Manchester (15th June), Leeds (TBC) and Liverpool (TBC), with company bragging rights at stake.

The events take place at secret locations in each city, such as warehouses, factories or even art galleries. Details of each event are revealed upon sign up. At each location an eight-table arena is built for 64 ping pong gladiators ready to do battle for their companies in front of a legion of supporters.

Ping Pong Fight Club provides complimentary drinks and branded T-shirts, cool merchandise, social ping-pong zones, live MCs, visuals, pop-up and 'speed networking' bars, great food, DJs, huge prizes, charity auctions and the Tsingtao Beer Pong Championships. There is even a Loop at Work package available for the winning company.

Start-ups and global brands alike, including Google Deep Mind, Deliveroo, Funding Circle, Lendinvest, Expedia, Ticketmaster, Moo.com, and Zopa have all previously discovered Ping Pong Fight Club is an exciting and inclusive new way to engage, motivate and share special experiences together.
