

Nottingham quartet take on world

Author: Paul Stimpson

Posted On: August 17, 2017

Four University of Nottingham table tennis players are spearheading Great Britain's efforts at the World University Games, which start in Chinese Taipei next week.

Multiple Commonwealth Games medallist and this year's BUCS champion Danny Reed leads the contingent, alongside Adam Harrison and Robert Gordon University's Colin Dalgleish in the men's event.

The women's team features Maria Tsapsinos and Yolanda King alongside Chloe Thomas of Bournemouth University.

Tsapsinos and the rest of the team has been hard in training in preparation. Watch some of the videos from Maria's twitter page below.

Perfecting the smaller details of my game before #WorldUniversityGames @UoNSport @UoNTT @TalentedAthlete 12 DAYS TO GO!!! #GreenandGold pic.twitter.com/rA7QlvWhYI

— Maria Tsapsinos (@MariaTsapsinos) August 5, 2017

Hill sprints this afternoon got me knackered! Pre season and preparation for #WorldUniversityGames @UoNSport @TableTennisENG @BUCSSport pic.twitter.com/ahezAyG9rk

— Maria Tsapsinos (@MariaTsapsinos) August 9, 2017

Team qualification begins on Tuesday and the competition continues until August 29 with singles, doubles and mixed doubles also on the programme.

Held biennially in major cities across the globe, the event, also known as the Summer Universiade, is the second largest multi-sport event after the Olympics, bringing athletes together to compete across 22 sports.

At the last Summer Universiade in 2015, the Brits made it to the round of 32 in the table tennis.

You will be able to watch the action live and keep up to date with results by clicking here

Downloaded From:

<https://newsarchive.tabletennisengland.co.uk/news/archived/nottingham-quartet-take-on-world/>