

All to play for after busy day one

Multiple teams are still in contention after a pulsating opening day's action at the School Games table tennis at Loughborough University.

With eight teams competing in boys', girls' and para (standing) categories, the destination of the titles are still very much up in the air with four more rounds of matches to come over the next three days.

Boys

It is all to play for at the top, with Scotland, England South East and England South West all winning their three matches today – while the North East cannot be ruled out having picked up two victories.

Scotland started by breezing past North West 5-0 with relatively few alarms, while South East were 4-1 winners against Wales in a closer match in which James Smith twice won in a deciding fifth.

Two five-set wins by Naphat Boonyaprapa in matches one and five could not prevent Midlands' 3-2 reverse at the hands of South West, while North East did not drop a game in their 5-0 win over Northern Ireland.

Wales' 3-2 win over North East in the second round would have been a surprise based on their first-round results – North East had enjoyed a 5-0 victory, whilst Wales were on the back of a 4-1 defeat.

But the Principality team were good value for their win and actually led 3-0 as Roberts beat Clark in the 'battle of the Joes' and Stacey beat Weatherby in the 'battle of the Joshes' – before Benedict Watson joined in to break the name pattern in the doubles.

South West beat North West 3-2, though the northern team took the doubles 17-15 in the fifth.

There was a second successive 4-1 win for South East, against Northern Ireland, with two singles wins apiece for Smith and George Hazell. Scotland saw off Midlands by the same score, Dylan Curry taking two singles.

The third round saw North East back to winning ways in emphatic style, 5-0 against North West, while it was also 5-0 for Scotland, against Wales.

The two southern teams kept up their 100% records South West thanks to a 4-1 margin against Northern Ireland and South East courtesy of a 3-2 win over Midlands – Israel Awolaja coming into the singles and winning both his ties.

Girls

As in the boys' competition, three teams lead the way with 100% records – in this case three English teams: Midlands, North East and South East.

Scotland's 4-1 win over South West in round one was closer than the scoreline suggested, with no matches decided in three straight and three of them going the distance. Faye Leggett's two singles victories proved decisive.

The match between Midlands and Northern Ireland saw four matches head to a fifth set, and Mollie Patterson won her two singles to ensure the English team took it 3-2 overall.

By contrast, North East and South East dropped only two games each in overcoming Wales and North West respectively.

The Irish girls bounced back in round two with another 3-2 scoreline as they came from 2-1 down to defeat South West, Rebecca Finn levelling and Lucy Craig then seeing off Amy Blagbrough.

North East and South East kept up their winning ways, though both had to settle for 4-1 scorelines this time.

Midlands also made it two from two, though their 5-0 defeat of Scotland was somewhat lop-sided as all the matches were close, Patterson again winning her two singles and playing her part in the doubles pair coming from 2-0 down to win.

Round three saw the unbeaten teams stay that way. It was relatively straightforward for the Midlands – 4-1 winners over Wales – and although North East won 3-2, they were 3-1 up.

South East found it trickier as they saw Northern Ireland come back from 2-0 down to level at 2-2, taking the doubles 12-10 in the fifth before Finn made it all square by defeating Sarah Menghistab. It was Kate Cheer who took the decisive point in three games against Craig.

North West picked up their first victory courtesy of a 3-2 scoreline against South West, despite Katie Holt's two singles triumphs.

Para (standing)

Tam Eastwood of Wales and Shae Thakker of England South East remain unbeaten with three wins each on day one.

On a day when six of the eight athletes notched at least one win, the top two look a cut above the rest and their meeting in round five on Saturday afternoon could be pivotal.

It was pretty plain sailing for Thakker as he dropped no more than four points in any one game, while Eastwood was stretched by Dylan Tynan of the South West, who won a prolonged first game 16-14 and took it to deuce in the second, before Eastwood pulled away to win 3-1.

North East athlete Alex Bland and Elliot Medland (Scotland) both have two victories, though Medland claimed a 3-1 win when the pair met in round two.
