Samuel Kwan and James Smith were the only England players to reach the main draw at the Czech Youth Open.

Kwan won his Junior Boys' Singles group with three victories out of three, and Smith also reached the knockout rounds, but both were eliminated in the first round. Matthew Daish and Shayan Siraj went out in the groups, though Siraj was on the wrong end of two five-set defeats.

Megan Gidney and Denise Payet were knocked out in the qualifying stage of the Junior Girls' Singles, though Gidney picked up a 3-2 win over Dora Cosic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

In the doubles, Gidney & Payet went out in the first round but Kwan & Siraj won their first match to join Daish & Smith in the second round – the latter having had a first-round bye. However, both pairs went out, Daish & Smith at the hands of fifth seeds Leo De Nodrest & Jules Rolland of France.

Kwan, Smith and Siraj featured in the team events, where they were beaten by China, Belgium and an Azerbaijan-Canada combination. Although there were some close games, Siraj picked up the only English victory, in the match against Belgium.
