No fewer than five schools will be aiming to defend their titles at the Butterfly School Team Championships on Saturday.

The event at Hinckley is the first national finals since the merger was completed between Table Tennis England and the former English Schools' Table Tennis Association.

A total of 32 teams will compete in four age groups, with both boys' and girls' titles up for grabs.

Both the Under-19 competitions feature the defending champions as Whitgift School boys and Tudor Grange Academy girls return.

Whitgift are spearheaded once again by England Youth Squad member James Smith, but among those up against them are St Mary's College, Hull, who have former Cadet national champion Harry Dai in their line-up. Indeed, Dai beat Smith in the final when he won that title.

The Tudor Grange team comprises sisters Lisa and Sophie Rinnhofer, and the team from Lancaster Girls' Grammar also has a pair of sisters – Alice and Megan Dillon.

Ackworth School boys go again in the Under-16s, and look a good bet to retain the title, featuring as they do the members of the Table Tennis England National Academy. George Spencer Academy will be among those looking to upset the form guide and feature a strong line-up of their own.

No defending champions in the U16 girls, where Charles Read Academy, led by Mollie Patterson, look strong.

Sacred Heart Catholic School from Southwark have the opportunity to win both boys' and girls' events at the U13 age group. They will be up against defending champions St Mary's College in the boys' side of the draw.
